

The Rowan Center

"Stay Safe, Stay Home, but Stay Connected, too. The staff at The Rowan Center are headed into a second full week of working remotely. Fortunately, we have been able to pivot to this new lifestyle rather quickly and are continuing to uphold our organization's mission: to provide counseling and support services to victims of sexual assault and to eliminate sexual violence through community-wide education programs in new, creative ways.

As a reminder, our 24-hour crisis hotlines are still live and fully staffed as we continue to offer our victim advocacy services. Don't hesitate to reach out to us at: (203) 329-2929.

Our office is closed, but we are still taking new clients and continuing counseling sessions with current clients by offering sessions over the phone or through video chat. We encourage current clients to reach out to their counselor directly for more information on those options. If you are a new client seeking services, please email our Director of Counseling, Luke, at lrobbins@therowancenter.org for more information, to ask questions, or to schedule an appointment. All calls are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL.

Our education department has also been hard at work creating online content for K-12 schools. If you're a teacher and are interested in including sexual violence prevention-related content to your online learning programs, please reach out to our Director of Education, Outreach, and Operations, Jessica, at jfeighan@therowancenter.org. Now is a great time for families to have these conversations, too, especially as screen time increases and internet cameras are normalized for everyone-check out our YouTube channel for our parent conversation starter video."
